The labor movement historically has been a beacon for improved workplace conditions, and has helped to make tremendous strides toward improving the lives of millions of workers. Still, most experts agree that much work is left to be done when it comes to addressing alcohol and drug addiction issues as they relate to occupational health and well-being.

Join host Ivette Torres, Associate Director for Consumer Affairs, Center for Substance Abuse Treatment (CSAT), Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), and a panel of experts in this important and timely Webcast as they look at occupations most at risk for substance abuse and discuss what labor organizations can do to help their ranks fully address these issues.

Panelists include:

- Robert Lindsey, President, National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence, Inc. (NCADD)
- Frank Migliaccio, Executive Director, International Association of Bridge, Structural, Ornamental, and Reinforcing Ironworkers
- Jamie Becker, Behavioral Health Care Coordinator, Laborers' Health and Safety Fund of North America
- Ann Price, Co-Chair, United Airlines, Association of Flight Attendants (AFA), Employee Assistance Program (EAP).

This Webcast also contains personal stories about people in recovery and interviews from treatment providers and others in the field who help make recovery possible.
